MADE IT SEEM PLEASANT.

Lawyer Talked Eloquently of Stay in the "Pen."

"I gave such a talk to a client of mine not long ago on the pleasant features of prison life," said a prominent local attorney recently, "that I actually got to thinking for a little while it would be a great lark to spend a few weeks in some good penitentiary."

"You see, the fellow was guilty, and I knew it. I didn't see how it would be possible to clear him, and I knew he would get a lighter sentence by pleading guilty. But I had a job trying to talk him into changing his plea to guilty. He said he didn't think he would ever get reconciled to life in the penitentiary."

"I told him that, of course, there was a certain amount of prejudice against living in a penitentiary, but that it always struck me that it wouldn't be half bad if a man went with his mind made up to like it."

"The regular hours ought to be a great thing for a man," I told him, "and if you are at all sick you can fix up some scheme to get out of hard work.
Then you are clear out of the prosaic business affairs of the outer world.
You go to bed at night knowing just what you will have to do the next day, and no one can get in where you are to molest you. You won't get more than a couple of years, and that will just give you time to learn some good trade."

"When I got through he decided to plead guilty, and I believe he was really looking forward to a year or two in the pen."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TOLD OF PRESIDENT MCKINLEY.

Incident Exemplifies His Devotion to His Wife.

The love which Mrs. McKinley bore her husband was so much the ruling passion of her life that she was extremely sensitive about him. In spite of herself, she was jealous even of the demands which the public made upon his time. Her love was matched by a most unusual devotion on the part of the president, as this heretofore unpublished incident illustrates. Col.
John N. Taylor, of East Liverpool, O., a lifelong friend of Mr. McKinley, who was known in Washington as "the man who had a latch-key to the White House," took his little granddaughter, Pauline Taylor, aged three, to the executive mansion for a visit.

She climbed upon Mr. McKinley's knee and soon discovered his watch.
Then she pried open the back of the case, as if looking for something.
"Why, Mr. President," she lisped.
"It's empty. My papa has my mamma's picture in his watch."

Mrs. McKinley's face fell on the instant, but the president was not found wanting.

"I carry my wife's picture in my heart, Pauline," he said, quietly, and Mrs. McKinley was all smiles again.

pensive for ordinary letter writing 'till recently. Other brands

Accumulating Possession.

There is not a vice which more effectually contracts and deadens the feelings, which more completely makes a man's affections center in himself, and excludes all others from partaking in them, than the desire of accumulating possessions. When the desire has once gotten hold of the heart, it shuts out all other considerations, but such as may promote its views. In its zeal for the attainment of its end, it is not delicate in the choice of means. As it closes the heart, also it clouds the understanding. It cannot discern between right and wrong; it takes evil for good, and good for evil; it calls darkness light, and light darkness.—Bishop Mant.

Sevigne in Versailles.

The chateau at Versailles can now be said to be possessing a portrait of the celebrated Mme. de Sevigne, who was one of the brightest stars of the court of Louis XIV., and who, strange to say, was not represented by her portrait there. M. de Nolhac, the curator, has just supplied this deficiency, having found a fine portrait of the marquise at the age of 35 years. The portrait, which is of great beauty, presents the famous letter writer with the long curls she brought into fashion, and which bore her name, and she wears the pearl necklace she described in her letters to her daughter.

The Sandal Question.

A college girl whose city home de-bars her from a trial of the Kneip cure has for her needle footgear the same style of sandals that children wear in the summer time without hesitation. "They give my feet a good airing every day and my toes a chance to spread out square as Mother Nature intended they should," is her simple explanation of the idea. She does not carry her feet outside the limits of her own private apartment, but even so, the time of release from hosiery and stylish shoes is a great relief, she claims, to tired feet.

Blind Swimmers Swim Straight.

It is a puzzling fact that blind swimmers are able to hold an almost perfectly straight course for considerable distances, though no more guidance is given to them than some species of call or whistle from the end of the course. A blind man, in fact, desiring to go in a straight line, possesses the curious power of being able to do so almost exactly.

His "Clinic" Portrait.

"That," remarked the artist casually, "is my clinic portrait."

"Clinic," exclaimed the visitor.
"Why drag in your father's profession?"

The painter grinned. "Well, that just describes it," he declared. "I call it that because four ladies came to call on me one afternoon, and after I had showed some of my work one of them asked me if I wouldn't show them just how I painted a portrait."

I asked one of them to pose for me and sat down and did that sketch for them in an hour. And that is why I call it my 'clinic.' That is what it was, you know."

Feathered Brigands.

Following the report of ravages by foxes in Richmond park comes news of wholesale massacres in London parks by other but equally destructive invaders. Ducklings newly hatched about the ornamental waters of the various parks are falling victims to the carrion crow. In the early morning this marauder, penetrating to the heart of London, watches and waits in a tree overlooking a lake, and in due course swoops down upon the helpless brood. One of these raids was witnessed by a keeper in Kensington gardens. Scores of ducklings have been devoured, and so many young birds have disappeared from the Serpentine of late that it was supposed that rats had been at work, but the blame is now laid on the carrion crow. As in the case of the foxes reprehals are occasionally made by the keepers with shotguns.—London Globe.
